There are 2 types of base queries: terms and phrases. A term is a single word of research. A sentence would be wrapped a string of words between quotes and find correspondences on the EXTRACT rope. Boolean operators can combine basic queries with Boolean operators to form a more complex query. Boolean operators define relations between terms or sentences. Our research supports the following Boolean and "+" operators, OR, NOT and "-". Please note that Boolean operators must be all uppercase letters. And the search example: Default and document This is the default operator. It will be used if there is no Boolean operator between two terms. For example: default document is the same as default and documents. In this case both terms must exist within an ad to find a correspondence on that character listing. The + is synonymous with and. O The search example: by default or a document in this case only one of the needs terms of existence within an ad to find a correspondence on that set for sale. NOT EXAMPLE OF SEARCH: DEFAULT NOT "Document Type" Not excludes operator documents that contain the term (or phrase) after not. So a match put on sale should include the word default but not the phrase "type of document". The character is synonymous with using NOT. JOLLY / Prefix Interrogates You can "jolly" or "prefix" query using the "*" operator. While all previous research found exact matches throughout the term or phrase, a search with wildcards will find partial correspondences. Search example: ehr * This query will correspond to all the documents containing words that start with the prefix 'ehr' as the word ehrlichia. Rudolf Medica is Keir Surgical's Premier tool supplier. In this example, you learn what solution the company uses to set the laser as the standard of the future and is optimally positioned for UDI and MDR. Founded in 1950, Rudolf Medical GmbH + Co. KG belonged for almost 70 years for the medical technology company group in the Tuttingen area, of which there are some 450s today. The family-run company has little less than 80 employees in two locations Fridingen. The products manufactured by traditional metal processing include surgical tools for open and minimally invasive surgery, especially fabric scissors, but also clamps and surgical needles, endoscopes and electronic medical equipment. Laser as the standard of the future for the marking of scissors and surgical instruments when the UDI is addressed And in search of the most suitable technology, the Rudolf Medical decision to work with Foba was simple. According to Gerhard Faßbinder, it was clear already after the first consultations: "For us there is no alternative to the Foba laser marking solutions. The technical concept of a camera-based marking process was fundamental to us and the It has so worth it. Because the camera is inside the laser, we must not take the parts marked out of the housing or otherwise move them for validation." Rudolf Medical Marks Medical Instruments with fiber-series laser marking systems M FOBA M. This is done with conviction, since marking lasers with integrated imaging satisfy medical device markers these. The important factors are the serialized marking of permanently readable UDI codes and a process of economic marking, subtle and reliable, based on a laser-integrated laser camera control system. The laser marking stations of the M series Foba M has a camera integrated in the marking head and have proved ideally suited to the most recent requirements. It is very likely that they will completely replace the chemical engraving process that has also been used until now, since the modification of the data matrix codes can only be applied with laser technology. Rudolf Medical is ideally positioned for UDI and MDR thanks to the laser marking solutions based on cameras and complete services.
